Compliments of Mr. Harris
The Case of the Angry Farmer

The other day we made this a Wailing Place because, we said, we had failed to get the one and only free government bulletin that would make sprightly editorial reading. Arkansas Democrat had gotten it, however, and produced a rattling good issue of "Run of the News" column. . . . Today Congressman Oren Harris sent us the missing bulletin.

Russians Crush German Counter Attacks, Drive Toward Smolensk

By the Associated Press

Russia declared Friday that her great winter offensive was rolling on unchecked, crushing German counter attacks with bloody losses, and Red Star, army newspaper, confidently predicted defeat of Hitler's heralded spring campaign and collapse of his armies this year.

Asserting that the fighting coalition of U. S., British and Russia far surpassed Germany in both resources and manpower reserves, Red Star declared:

"Economic resources will mean the final decision. The help we are receiving from our Allies is growing continuously."

Red Star said that Hitler already had lost 6 million men in Russia and that he could not replace his manpower.

Prime Minister Churchill countered the storm of criticism over the British military reverses in North Africa and the Far Pacific by streamlining his war cabinet in a shakeup in which Sir Stafford Cripps, former ambassador to Moscow, emerged as the outstanding new figure.

A bulletin from Hitler's field headquarters acknowledged the Russians still were on the offensive and reiterated the unconfirmed claim that Red army forces on the Moscow front had been encircled.

Fresh attempts by the enemy to break out were frustrated, the Nazi command said without specifying the location of the alleged trap.

By contrast up to date maps show Hitler's armies are themselves endangered by gigantic Russian moves pressing down both flanks of the ocean corridor along the old Napoleon road from Moscow to Smolensk.

On the North African front bad weather brought a lull in the desert battle.

However, British headquarters reported that Axis armed forces withdrew after exchanging fire with the British in the desert.

Partial Postal Service Monday

No Rural Delivery, Observance Washington Birthday

There will be no rural mail delivery Monday, February 23, and city service will be restricted, in observance of Washington's birthday which falls on Sunday, Postmaster Robert M. Wilson announced Friday afternoon.

There will be morning delivery of mail only, by carriers, and window service will be given at the general delivery and stamp windows between 9 and 11 a. m. only. Postmaster Wilson said. Mail will be dispatched as usual, and will be placed in patrons' boxes.

Oil Road Fund Stalls $1,050 C. of C. Reports

Only $40 in New Donations Added During Friday; Goal $1,500

It is "Women's Measurements: For Garment and Pattern Construction," being Miscellaneous Publication No. 454 of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

It is a fine-looking document of 74 pages, with pictures—but don't misunderstand me: The pictures are strictly for serious workers in the art of making clothes.

What attracted attention to the document in the first place was that it reported that a survey of the feminine half of America showed New Jersey women to have the worst figures and Arkansas women to have the best.

Certainly that's worth two-time mention . . . on this occasion when I am thinking Congressman Harris for supplying the missing bulletin.

This is on the grapevine along Merchant's Row:

Early this week a Hempstead country farmer was in a Second street store damming the Chamber of Commerce because "it put the price of eggs down to 18 cents." The farmer's parting shot was:

"I'm going home now and give the Chamber of Commerce hell and kill every hen hen on my place!"

Eighteen-cent eggs mean trouble . . . but it's kind of trouble that makes the Chamber of Commerce feel like small potatoes.

Those of us who understand how difficult it is to make a co-operative enterprise work on more community markets, should make a case like this inspire us to greater effort.

Right now the Chamber of Commerce is stalled at less than $1,000 in its drive to raise $1,500 for the new oil field road south of Patmos. The money has got to be raised, for we have pledged it to County Judge Fred Luck to pay his gasoline and other out-of-pocket expense while working county equipment on the new road.

Let's kick in now and get it over with.

A Gesture of Farewell

Very quietly and without much public notice, congress is doing away with Section 7 of the Neutrality Act. This is the section which provided that no person in the United States might lend money to a foreign government at war.

Of course the section no longer means anything, now that we are actually at war, and so it must be repealed.

What is happening is more interesting than that.

It is no less than the complete wiping out of a 20-years' philosophy, drawn in the tidal wave of actual events, sub-merged in the flood of fast-flowing history.

After the First World War came a period of intense disillusionment. Obviously the objects for which the war was fought were imperfectly realized. How could an America still living in the "splendid isolationism" of the 19th century have been "sucked into" Europe's war? People began to question.

They found plenty that was questionable. They found smelly nests of secret diplomacy. They found that munitions had been privately manufactured and sent abroad at big profits. They found huge private loans to the allies. They deduced that those things brought us into the war. How avoid another war? Simply by not doing those things.

It was not that simple. Greater forces were at work. The Neutrality Act protected us against loan-entanglement. Not only did we make few munitions for the allies—we virtually abolished our munitions industry, so that when war came, we had to build one from scratch.

In the months before war came, no private interests had loaned money to fighting nations. Cash and carry guaranteed that such munitions as were privately furnished to belligerents were paid for on the barrel-head. No private financial interests, then, were drawing us toward war. Yet war came closer and closer, and finally it struck, treacherously and without warning.

A bigger game was being played than a mere juggling with loans and munitions. The stake was the domination of the world, and we stood in the way. Our whole outlook, cared to a microscopic view of a single phase of the First World War problem, was blind to the largest phase of the new problem. Like France, we said always to be prepared for the previous war, we took all our measures to prevent the previous war. It helped to blind us to the realities of this one.

Now we are learning, the hard way. The lesson that we must look forward, not back; we must bear our full share in so arranging the world that this shall not happen again.

Brazilian Ship Sunk Off U. S. Coast by Sub

Freighter Orlina Torpedoed; Sub Dives at Approach of U. S. Planes

NORFOLK, Va.—(7)—The 4,080-ton

Brazilian freighter Orlina was sunk by an Axis submarine described as "pocket sized" off the Atlantic coast Wednesday afternoon and crewmen, two of whom were taken aboard the submarine for questioning, said the undersea craft dived later at the approach of U. S. Naval planes.

The Fifth Naval District authorized release of details of the sinking after all members of the crew of 46 in two lifeboats were picked up by a rescue ship and landed here.

The men were rescued after drifting and rowing for 20 hours. The Navy withheld any further details concerning operations of the U. S. planes.

Francisco Nogueira of São Paulo, Brazil, said he and Capt. Jacob Benevides were ordered aboard the submarine by its commander and questioned concerning the nature of their cargo, where they were from and their destination.

The submarine which fired 17 or

18 shells—more or less—at the ship before the crew abandoned her sent a torpedo into the Orlina about midship after the crew had taken to the boats. Nogueira said, adding that the freighter went down about one and a-half hours later.

Fortifications Guard Seas Bering Discovered

THICKLY interspersed in waters discovered and named for Vitus Johansen Bering, are defenses and fortifications that bar Japanese threats to Soviet bases on the Siberian or Kamchatka coast and to Alaskan outposts in the Aleutian or Diomede islands.

The stamp above, issued in 1941, commemorates the bi-centenary of the death of Bering, Danish expatriate who served with the Russian navy in extensive explorations of the long Russian north-eastern coast. The stamp pictures an 18th century sailing vessel.

Bering was born at Horsens, Jutland, in 1681 and joined the Danish navy as a youth. In 1704 he entered the Russian navy and served in the war against Sweden.

Peter the Great, czar of Russia, appointed Bering in 1724 to conduct an expedition to Siberia to determine whether Asia and America were divided. The navigator termed his first expedition a failure. In 1740 he set out again, this time with the backing of the Empress Catharine.

He "discovered" America when he landed on an island in the Aleutian group. On the return voyage to Russia, Bering became ill, and died on an uninhabited island near Kamchatka. The island was later named Bering in his honor.

THE STORY: Schoolmates in smalltown Kings Row are orphaned. Parrish Mitchell, despondent overloss of father of childhood, meets his new teacher, who's her avary and boy Drake McHugh, tomboy Randy Monaghan, beautiful Cassandra, who's despoiled, fatherless, town mystery. All these, out of school after socials with from Garibaldi Louise Gordon, leading playgirl's daughter half-wit Benny Singer, half-angel Dorothy Jones, who's lawyer Skeffington and friend Bill when Benny challenges attack from bully Fulmer Green and gang. Other characters: Madame von Eln, Parrish's grandmother, whom he adores; Tom Carr, Madame's new overseer, and his insane wife, Lucy. Tom suggests to Parrish, would-be doctor, to study treatment of mental ill.

TOM CARR'S SUGGESTION
CHAPTER IX

BENNY SINGER was happy. Whenever he went to town on errands for Tom Carr, he went without shrinking from encounters with his old tormentors. "Hey, Benny! Look, kids, here's old crazy Benny!" He didn't mind being called "crazy Benny." Not now. He had a job. He worked for Madame, and Tom Carr was his friend. There was not a cloud in Benny's sky.

Once or twice Tom Carr talked to Parrish about Benny. "He's a little like Lucy, sometimes. You know, Sonny, people that are a little off that way are just like a string of beads that's come undone. The beads roll around any which-a-way. If there was some way of getting them on the string again, they'd be all right. Doctors do some right wonderful things when it comes to cutting people open and sewing them up again, but they're not so far along with people's brains."

Parrish had heard Tom Carr say all of this so many times.

"You know what I'd do if I was you?" The old man's sharp eyes shadowed with the gravity of his feelings. "I'd study that if I was you."

"Be a doctor for—for—" He didn't like to say "crazy people" to Tom.

"Yes, sir, Sonny, for crazy people. May be that nobody's found out much about it yet, but it seems to me it would be a grand thing to study. People like Benny, and—like Lucy. Not real crazy, you know, Sonny, just off a little. If there was just some way of holding them together again . . ."

Parrish was pretty sure now that he would like to be a doctor. But he thought he'd rather drive two fiery bay horses like Dr. Gordon and go around saving people's lives. Suddenly he recalled that day Dr. Gordon operated on Willy Macintosh's father. He remembered the terrible yell that came from that upper window.

He realized that he loved this place, this right here, the ground, the crisscross pattern the wiry grass made, the shiny red stems of vines, the dusky blue coat on winterberries. It was familiar and comfortable.

But even in that instant a small unease returned. He knew what the feeling was, and what it came from. Other boys had parents who were not so old as his grandmother. They had brothers and sisters and relatives. He had only his grandmother. What would happen when—when—? He couldn't say the word even to himself. Then—all of this would be gone somehow. Where would he go?

* * *
MADAME VON ELN sat on the terrace that same afternoon talking with Dr. Gordon and Colonel Skeffington.

DARRIS was dismayed when he heard that he was to go to Aberdeen College. For the first time in his life he was near to being critical and resentful of his grandmother's arrangements.

Parrish was not told that he was regarded by the other students as something of a prodigy. They also thought him conceited and stand-offish, so he made no friends. Outside of the classrooms, Aberdeen made but little impression on him. His reading with Dr. Tower was a different matter. He spent three afternoons each week with Dr. Tower. They were hours of excitement and revelation.

He never forgot that first afternoon when Cassandra answered his ring at the door.

"Down there—the last door."

Parrish stood looking at her. She was much prettier than he had remembered her to be.

"How have you been, Cassie? I haven't seen you in an awfully long time."

"I'm all right." She looked at him steadily, her eyes very large and bright.

Parrish walked the length of the dim passage and rapped softly on the door.

"Come in, come in."

The voice was something of a surprise. It was deep and musical.

"How do you do, sir?"

Doctor Tower nodded. His eyes, exactly like Cassie's, Parrish thought, seemed somewhat unseeing.

"Hereafter, you may come around to the study door. It won't be necessary to come through the house."

Parrish felt his face flame. The simple statement seemed to carry not only a rebuke but some sort of obscure threat.

Sunday School Lesson

Prayer Is Great Discipline of Soul, Bringing Strength and Power to Men
Text: Luke 6:22-26

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.

Editor of Advance

Into this lesson on the appointment of the 12 apostles is packed about as much significant fact and truth as could be found anywhere in all the records of mankind since writing began.

First of all, we are told that "in these days Jesus went out into the mountain to pray and He continued all night in prayer to God." What days were these when Jesus thus felt the need of prayer? They were the days when His earthly mission was developing, when the crowds were hurrying to Him because of His healing and His wonderful works, and when intensely earnest souls were turning Him because they perceived in Him a great teacher. They were days when anyone filled with ideas of worldly success would have wanted to stay with the crowd exploiting every event and incident of popularity. But Jesus went into the mountain to pray and prayed all night!

What a revelation we have here of the religion that Jesus brought to men! How utterly the standards of His truth and His kingdom are different from the standards of the world! How completely is the Christian ideal of success and of triumphant life at variance with the worldly idea of success! And how deeply and strongly does this record concerning the Master speak concerning what is necessary for our lives!

If Jesus felt the need of prayer, how much more do we need prayer in our lives! And if we could sense the things that Jesus prayed for in His all-night meditation and supplication, would we not understand better than we do the true place and function of prayer?

Can we imagine for a moment that Jesus prayed during that night on the mountain for material things or for material blessings? Did prayer for Him mean the earth-bound things which it has meant for so many of us? Or, was not prayer for Him a great discipline in which He was seeking to discover the Father's will and to conform Himself completely to it? This surely is the true place and function of prayer—not getting things in the ordinary mistake notion of Christian prayer, but attaining to the supreme thing, which is unity of our wills with God.

It's in a passage like this, too, that we are able to perceive and understand the true humanity of Jesus. The divine revelation that He gave was in an earthly life, subject to temptation, capable of enduring trial and sorrow, subject also to weakness and needing the disciplines by which alone life can be made strong.

The example of the Master ought to stand before us insistently whenever we have any tendency to lapse in our own morale or to take things for granted. Prayer is a great discipline of the soul, leading men to God and bringing God's strength and power to men for their daily tasks.

Then, as if it were not already enough in this lesson, we have the great passage which we call "the Beatitudes"—the blessings that Jesus pronounced which, quite as truly as the withdrawal of Jesus from the throng and His praying all night in the mountain, suggest how different the standards of right and character and success in the Kingdom of God are from the material and shallow standards that are set up in ordinary life.

Heroic Adventure of General Custer Opens at Saenger

The co-starring team of Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland who have made screen history with such pictures as "Robin Hood," "Captain Blood," "The Charge of the Light Brigade" and "Santa Fe Trail," will be back at the Saenger Theater, starting Sunday, with their newest Warners Bros. picture, "They Died With Their Boots On," a film that tells in spectacular detail, the story of General George Custer, one of the nation's most colorful heroes. Director Raoul Walsh, master of the outdoor epic, guided the production. The name of Custer invariably brings to mind, of course, the phrase, "Custer's Last Stand," which has become an idiom in our language for desperate fight against overwhelming odds. And it is this very heroic stand which makes the tremendous

'Go to Church'

Drive Begun Ministerial Alliance to Sponsor Movement in Hope

Sunday

The Hope Ministerial Alliance will sponsor a special "Go to Church" movement, beginning on Easter Sunday and closing on Mother's Day, Rev. Kenneth L. Spore, president announced. It is hoped that all people living in Hope will resolve to attend some church service at least once every Sunday, especially during this campaign.

All active members of every church are hereby asked to join in with their pastors to talk up this movement. Talk about it with your neighbors and friends, your business associates, and all with whom you come in contact.

Urge all to attend one church every Sunday, especially between Easter and Mother's Day.

25th Birthday Near for Club

Brewster Suggests Rotary Celebration Next Year

Hope Rotary club will be 25 years old next year, and this led the Rev. Thomas Brewster, secretary and speaker at Friday noon's luncheon in First Christian church, to suggest that the club plan a suitable celebration when that time rolls around. The local club was founded February 10, 1918, the Rev. Mr. Brewster said, following by some years the establishing of Rotary as a national organization by Paul Harris in Chicago in 1905. The movement became international in August, 1912, when clubs in Canada and England were admitted to membership.

Rotary now has 5,100 clubs over the world, with a membership of 215,000, the speaker said.

Hope's first president was Jess Riley. Twenty-five men have served as president, numbering among them the late George W. Robison, father of the present president of the club. And there have been 14 secretaries. Club membership here has ranged from 16 to 43, with an average of between 25 and 30, the Rev. Mr. Brewster concluded.

Guests Friday were: E. A. Fiscus, Wynne; Preston N. Cook of Monett, Mo., brother of Fred Cook, of this city; Jack Lowe, Gurdon; and George W. Peck, Arkadelphia.

The program of music which the choir will present in Hope this year is said to be unusually attractive and worshipful. One of the features which has in the past caused favorable comment has been the personal testimonies of the young people and the readings given with musical background.

WASHINGTON — (P) — In response to angry criticism from all over the country, the Senate voted Thursday night, 75 to 5, to scrap the "pensions for congress" law and then decided to give the nation's fighting men abroad a raise in pay.

Exactly one month after it voted, 42 to 24, to grant pension privileges to members of congress, the president, vice president and cabinet, the chamber reversed itself in response to widespread reaction that included a "Bundles for Congress" movement and other barbed criticism.

WASHINGTON — (P) — In response to angry criticism from all over the country, the Senate voted Thursday night, 75 to 5, to scrap the "pensions for congress" law and then decided to give the nation's fighting men abroad a raise in pay.

Exactly one month after it voted, 42 to 24, to grant pension privileges to members of congress, the president, vice president and cabinet, the chamber reversed itself in response to widespread reaction that included a "Bundles for Congress" movement and other barbed criticism.

It's so bad, in fact, that a repeal move is snowballing along, with a lot of sound and fury in both house and senate. Whether a large number of congressmen sincerely think they passed a bad law (many members were not present either time the measure went through the house, although the vote in the senate was a matter of record, and one congressman declared not one-tenth of the house membership was present when the bill originally was brought up) or whether they have heard the first rumblings of a storm from opponents who will face them at the polls is a matter for conjecture.

There is one thing, however: I have never seen a bill passed about which there has been so much misunderstanding and misstatement.

In the first place, the amendment bringing congress under the retirement law is merely an extension of the already existing pension law which now covers 1,250,000 federal employees. The only way that it differs is that members of congress have to serve five years before they are eligible for participation and they have the option of going into it or staying out. If they go in, they have to contribute to the retirement fund 5 per cent of their salary or $500 annually.

If their participation in the act is unsound from an actuarial standpoint, then the whole act is unsound.

But let's look at some other phases of this new law. The library of Congress says that from the very beginning of congress to now, only 35 per cent of the members have ever served more than two terms. In other words, there would never be more than 152 members of the house eligible for participation.

There are at present about 80 senators who have served more than one term and would be eligible.

The law does have a couple of loopholes that would allow present members of retirement age to pay a small premium and retire with an annuity—but Civil Service, which has
